The patch is a simple, yet effective update of the game. The major addition is the inclusion of the 6 swords at the beginning of the game. The update also includes a graphical upgrade. Mount And Blade With Fire And Sword Patch 1.140 The author has earned a reputation for his defensive use of projectiles. May even pull off a flip or kite on the cinder block of doom. The high damage even long ranged projectiles allow is a bit hard to pull off if you can only push once or twice, while the rest of the force will be blocked by the walls and such. In the tutorial level, you are required to do a flip into the wall and kill the two guards. The guard that still has a sword is a little tougher, but it can be done, just more difficult and difficult. One of the problems is that he sits down far too easily and is not very offensive. The exothermic blast that he uses is similar to an elemental and is a large, high pressure bomb-like explosion. The blast can destroy walls and much of the environment, however, and if you get too close it will explode. The last option is that it can be used to teleport away from opponents or to get out of a bad situation, he has decent damage and speed for a defensive projectile. However, it is easy to flee if not up close to your opponent. The major addition is the inclusion of the 6 swords at the beginning of the game. Since you have multiple swords from the beginning of the game, using them can actually be a decent weapon. The Wind Chime Sword has a very similar effect to the Lightning Blade, but is still a far cry from the original sword of the same name. I have always wondered why the old sword is always so much better for direct defense against fire than the Wind Chime Sword, even though the Wind Chime Sword is a lot more powerful. The Wind Chime Sword, however, has about 40% of the Fire resistance of the old sword. It is an excellent weapon for direct, but cannot be used for dodging like the old sword. The sword is also far superior in speed to the old sword for a direct attack. It doesn't do much direct damage however. It is more effective than the wind sword in all other areas though. The Wind Chime Sword is only used by one of the male classes at the beginning of the game, the ba244e880a.
